Reflexology

The art of reflexology dates back to Ancient Egypt, India and China, although it wasn't until 1913 that it was introduced to the West as 'Zone Therapy'. In the 1930's this was further developed to what we now know as reflexology.

Reflexology is a complementary treatment, which works on the feet to aid healing to the whole person not just the prevailing symptom.

Reflexology can be used to help restore and maintain the body's natural equilibrium. This gentle therapy encourages the body to work naturally to restore its own healthy balance. It is suitable for all ages and may bring relief from a wide range of acute and chronic conditions. After one or two treatments your body may respond in a definite way. Most people note a sense of well being and relaxation; sometimes people report feeling lethargic, nauseous or tearful, but this is transitory and is part of the healing process.

Reflexologists do not claim to cure, diagnose or prescribe. Each session of reflexology works on an individual basis. It is suggested that reflexology may help to aid; Stress Related conditions, Back Pain, Fertility, Migraine, Sleep disorders or Hormone imbalances.
